As will be seen by the advertisement the Library concert has been postponed until Wednesday next. The reason was that some of the ladies would like a little more practice and the Conservative Association wanted to hold a meeting in the Opera House to-night for which they paid the sum of $15 to the Library Board to cover what expenses the Board had been put to and also to cover any loss that may occur on the return of tickets which is understood has taken place, the buyers demanding their money back. Under the circumstances the Board decided to postpone the concert.

The Phonograph Imp Entertains Billieboy

"GRRR-ORR!" whined the Imp, as it first drew when set running.

But no one had started it. And, as phonographs usually don't play of their own accord, Billieboy jumped with astonishment.

"Billieboy! Billieboy! Come here, my Billieboy!" some one sang.

Then Billieboy whistled. It was so strange. He didn't know father possessed a record for such a song—and that twanging, sing-song tone certainly belonged to the phonograph. Billieboy drew nearer to investigate. He rubbed his eyes, blinked and looked hard. It couldn't be eyes. It surely was—the funniest little manikin imaginable. He must have been an elf lost from a fairy tale, this fellow, who, with the skill of a div propped on the ceiling, careers—ly held footing inside the phonograph horn.

"Don't stare so, Billieboy; it's impolite," said the manikin, in a thin, rasping voice. "You ought to say something especially nice, inasmuch as you've been forcing my acquaintance for the last six months."

"Forcing your acquaintance?" gasped Billieboy.

"Well, haven't you been spouting into the horn whenever you've had the chance, and haven't you been longing to find out where the sound comes from?" sharply retorted the elf. "Of course you have. And since you've gazed so much at the outside of my house, I've decided to let you see the inside. As for the sound, if you weren't so ignorant you'd know it is I, the Imp of the Phonograph, who makes it. But come, there's lots to see and not a deal of time in which to see it."

Thereupon the Imp turned, as though expecting Billieboy to follow. "What's the matter now?" he demanded, when he saw the boy made no movement.

"How can I crawl into such a little place?" asked the bewildered Billieboy.

The Imp breathed hard and seemed about to utter some very wicked words.

"What of all the helpless creatures?" he finally managed to sputter. "If you feel as small as you really ought to feel, you won't have the least difficulty in getting into my home. See here, don't you feel very small and meek?"

Billieboy, much embarrassed, shifted his weight from one foot to the other. "Yes, I guess so," he muttered. And no sooner was this spoken than he shrank and shrunk until he was even tinier than the elf.

Fortunately, there was a chair beside the table upon which the phonograph rested. Up this Billieboy swarmed, until he was on a level with the horn. The Imp grasped his arm and pulled him up and the Imp's very surface, while Billieboy felt as though he were a fly being dragged into a spider's den.

"BANG MUSICALLY INTO THE HORN"

At every step the way grew more narrow, until the Imp pushed open a little round door at the end of the passage, and the two stumbled into a cozy little room.

Billieboy looked around him in amazement. The apartment seemed to be fitted up as a library. Bookshelves ran all about the room, but as the Imp shortly explained, the library, for the most part, consisted of volumes of music.

"Would you mind telling me what that is for?" asked the boy, pointing to a brass tube which extended from the wall around the end of which was a horn with a large, flat bell.

"What you see," explained the Imp,

"as soon as any one places a record on the phonograph, I receive the message through this horn. Then I take down from the shelf the music book in which the song is written and sing into the horn. This is what you people hear."

"Oh, you must know a lot about music!" gasped Billieboy.

The Imp smiled modestly as he replied: "That's my business, and I have to, you know. Yes, I can make a noise like a whole orchestra, or I can sing duets and quartets with myself quite easily. I know all the tunes so well that I really don't have much need of music scores, but I always take down the books, anyway, in case my memory should happen to fail me."

At this moment an ominous buzzing came from the horn. Flaming quickly to it, the Imp listened a moment.

Then he hastily grabbed a book from the shelf and, with a singing very mysteriously, a selection from "I Travaire."

"Great!" cried Billieboy, enthusiastically, when the Imp had finished.

"Hush! You mustn't talk so loud, or they'll hear you outside," cautioned the Imp. "Though I know some people would probably think it part of the music," he added, with a sardonic smile.

"That's all," Billieboy. I don't want to send you away. Don't you think, however, that you'd better get back before your folks discover your absence. You know, they'll think it strange if you're not around when the phonograph begins to play. You always are."

The Imp agreed with his friend, and soon they were crawling toward the mouth of the great horn. Billieboy said good-bye with much regret, and promised to visit the Imp often. Then he slid down the back of the chair to the carpet. An instant—and he was the size of the former Billieboy.

Thereafter, when Billieboy heard the sounds coming from the phonograph his eyes no longer grew big with wonder. Instead, he smiled a knowing smile that greatly puzzled every one. But THEY knew nothing about the Imp of the Phonograph.

A Simple Microscope

IF YOU have need of the enlargements of writing, which is small, and illegible, or if you desire to increase the size of any other object, why not make your own microscope?

Cut out a piece of tin cardboard. Ink one side of this with it is entirely black. Make a pinhole in the center of the sheet.

Looking through this pinhole, you will be surprised to learn what a good microscope you have manufactured.

"THE FUNNIEST MANIKIN"

PLAYFELLOWS

ALTHOUGH the picture shows but two of the "playfellows," in reality there were three of them. But the third was only a boy, and therefore not nearly so interesting as the two little St. Bernard puppies. The doggies, by the way, are no longer puppies. Oh, dear no! They've grown ten times as big by now. And the boy is almost a man now.

Many a frolic had the three comrades. It was in the winter, however, that the doggie playfellows enjoyed themselves best of all, for then they could roll in the snow, burying themselves until only their eyes and muzzles could be seen. You may know what a delightful time they had, when some years after they were found they accompanied their boy playfellow across the sea to Switzerland, up among the snow and ice and glaciers.

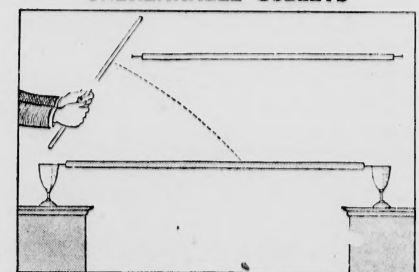

While the three were in Switzerland they became separated for almost the first time in their lives. Indeed, were it not for the doggie, perhaps, the third playfellow would have been lost not only to the trio, but to every one else. It happened one afternoon when the boy stole away with only his chains. Up the snowy mountain path he climbed, although such ways were forbidden except when under the guidance of grown-ups. The boy, however, didn't care. He had grown-ups with him that afternoon who insisted only his chains to share the fun.

But the boy didn't have half the fun he expected. While recklessly following the path he stepped and in an instant he was crawling down a steep, frozen wall of ice. Luckily, a projection of ice arrested his flight. He hung there, while his chains barked in dismay from the path above. Then one of the wise doggies galloped toward the hotel in search of help. Not long afterward a party came to the rescue, but it is doubtful if there would have been a boy to rescue even then, had not the other doggie barked his encouragement continually to the boy, who, chilled through and through, found the utmost difficulty in remaining upon his dangerous perch.

So the three playfellows were united. And the boy was taught a lesson. Since then he has taken good care not to become lost to his playfellows. Nor if he has his way will the doggie ever be lost to him.

UNBREAKABLE COBLET'S

STICK a needle into each end of a light wooden rod, and place the rod in the manner illustrated by the drawing.

Strike the rod sharply. It will break without causing the coblets to change their position.

For practice it would be well, first, to try a very light piece of wood—a matchstick, for example.

Daddy Stork's Mistake

FOR a long time Charles had prayed for a sister—a nice little baby sister, whom she could love and fondle. And now the wish had been granted. A baby brother that frolicked and squaled and looked ever so comely for.

"Daddy Stork," he said, "I have made a mistake. I'm sure he must, and I do wish he'd take this baby back," said Charles, bravely, as he frowned upon his baby brother.

Charles didn't know just how it came about, but suddenly he found before him a radiant angel, clad in a gleaming robe of white and wearing a halo that shone above her head. And the angel, though still smiling sweetly, said quite reproachfully to the little girl:

"There was no mistake. The queen of heaven heard your prayer, and immediately she made a little cherub cease from playing with the stars, and run across to the chamber of souls with a message. Now, this message directed that a delightful little girl baby be selected from among the souls, and be given to the stork messenger. But when we happened to tell the queen that a naughty boy baby was disturbing the little souls, she commanded this baby sent to you, in order that it might learn patience and kindness."

"I have just been too busy for anything," murmured Charles through his tears, and went on, please, tell the queen that I'll be as kind and patient as ever I can. And I really do feel that love baby brother now."

Charles quickly moved that. After all, Daddy Stork had made no mistake.

To Stimulate Eyelashes

WHAT woman does not wish for long, curling eyelashes?

They are one of the details that make a woman attractive, and it does seem as though they could be cultivated.

Vaseline, pure white vasoline, rubbed on with a small brush every night, is a splendid tonic for those much-desired lashes. Keep the eye slightly closed, that the grease may reach the roots of stubborn lashes, although if the vasoline is fresh and of good quality it cannot hurt the eye. In fact, one woman who has found the remedy successful says that, on the contrary, the eyes become brilliant under treatment, while the longer lashes make a marked improvement in the appearance.

"Old Soc" of the Tower

"WHY do we call him 'Old Soc'?" remarked the warden of the Tower of London. "Well, 'Soc' is short for 'sociable,' and the old bird is so wise that nothing seems to fit."

"Not but what he hasn't had plenty of time to learn. He was the pet of the Tower long before I was appointed warden, and he must be at least 50 years old. 'How old are you, Soc?'"

The warden looked affectionately at the splendid raven, who seemed fully 50 years old. His own green, black-and-white plumage was somewhat faded now, but ever knew how it happened—the "old" bird had an accident with a stick. He charged it, and shot himself, you know. Pretty badly hurt he was, too. But Soc was too smart to let that matter bother him. After hovering about his master for a minute, he flew rapidly toward the nearest house. All the folk "knew" there knew the explanation. So Soc, naturally, was acquainted with the facts, and he was very satisfied with the result. Feeling sure something was wrong, they permitted themselves to be guided by the bird to where the ex-warden lay, unconscious.

"OLD SOC" FED BY THE WARDEN

he was a very old bird for one so years old.

Old Soc croaked his gratitude for the tidbit which the warden passed to him and the man, gazing reflectively at the bird, continued:

"The old fellow could tell many an interesting story, if he chose. And he well deserves his reputation for intelligence."

"When the warden before me was retired because of age, he moved out to a little place in the country. Old Soc had become so attached to him that he went along with his master. Well it was for the man, too."

"He liked to be busy, the ex-warden said. And he pestered 'round as much as he was able to, even going on little trips with his gun, always taking the raven along with him, of course."

"Upon one of these occasions—one

"The old man grew somewhat better, but he never fully recovered. When he died, they say he really treated by his own hands many years ago. I hope and haven't forgotten it."

Old Soc, who had been gravely listening, with his head turned slightly to one side, now gave a fluttering jump to capture the last morsel of food from the warden. Then he rubbed his head, as though bowing, and strutted with great dignity toward the ex-warden's house.

"Snowing old bird!" commented the warden, and we agreed with him.

Three Hills

We had a very successful agricultural show on Friday the 9th inst., which was held on the beautiful plot in a bend of the Three Hill creek, near the creamery. There were present at least 1000 who came from all points. A good prize list was gotten up by the Committee and their tireless secretary Mr. Rath. We were favored by pretty fair weather. The proceedings were opened by a few words from the president Mr. Geo. Dobson, after which our member, Mr. C. Hiebert made a most eloquent address as Hon. President. He touched upon the wealth of agricultural products shown, the fine teams and cattle and last but not least, the beauty of the ladies present and the wonderful progress this settlement has made in so short a time. The judges then distributed the prizes after which there were horse racing, broncho busting, etc., ending up with banquet and speeches and a grand ball at C. Rotham's ending in the small hours of the morning.

In the exhibition ring the classes for horses were well filled, and there were brought out some pretty good animals making a pretty good task for the judge. In cattle S. S. Nichols took the lead, while in shorthorns Chas. Raethla had everything his own way in hereofers, there being some fine animals.

The dairy cow class was keenly contested and brought out some animals that are hard to beat anywhere. There were some fine exhibits of poultry from Sunnyslope, Ghost Pine and Royton, and many prizes were carried away. In vegetables the exhibit will be found hard to beat in any place in Alberta. The same may also be said of the grain exhibits. The space allotted for ladies work was far too small to accommodate the exhibit which was par excellence and reflects credit on the ladies for the interest taken in this class of work. The directors are justly entitled to congratulate themselves on the success of the first fall fair at Three Hills. Mr. A. W. Pratt the owner of the Three Hills creamery very kindly placed his building at the disposal of the directors as an exhibition hall, and it was all that could be desired. There were several visitors present from Didsbury some of whom carried off some handsome prizes.

Vasco Nichols took the lead with large potatoes, one weighed 2 lb 4 oz; in turnips he had five that weighed over 40 lbs.

Charlie Conrad of Ghost Pine was at the fair.

Mr. Durand drove a six horse team to the fair, and while he was interested in the bucking contest the team started to run away but one of the horses fell after going a short distance and this brought the others to a stop before any damage was done.

Speaks Well of Didsbury

The following clipping which is taken from the Commercial, published in Winnipeg, and one of the best retail trade papers in Canada, gives a short but well written description of Didsbury and district which will reach a large number of people who have their eyes turned towards this last great west and who cannot fail to realize the advantages of this district when it is brought before them by such a well-known and well written paper as the Commercial:

"The town of Didsbury is one of the centres of importance on the line of the Calgary and Edmonton railway, and is 48 miles, due north from Calgary. When approaching the town from the south, one industry after another is passed. First the creamery, then the flour mill, the wood-working factory and the brickyard. The three big elevators at the station convey, though only feebly, an idea of what may possibly be done in grain raising, away out yonder where field joins field, mile after mile, far beyond the power of the eye to carry.

The majority of the settlers here came from the German district of Pottsville and Bremer. They are thrifty, industrious and their farms are well tilled, as were their old homes 'down east.' Their stock is carefully looked after; they build most substantial dwellings, and most comfortable barns and stables. Although there is no section of Alberta which yields grain of all kinds more bountifully or yields crops, year after year, more uniformly full, one great error has been avoided (the common error made by pioneers, and continued by many old settlers, which even costly experience has failed to teach the folly of), namely, of making grain the mainstay of the farm; grain that is so peculiarly sensitive to every change and danger of climate and season. Mixed farming has been followed; along with grain, great numbers of cattle, hogs and poultry are raised, bringing constant returns to the producers."

Good Advice

Local buyers are taking a hand in the moving of grain from Alberta. They are making it an object for the farmers to ship through them. The freight rate from Carstairs to Fort William is 25c per 100 lbs. This makes it 15 cents for a bushel of wheat. Add to this 1 cent for the commission makes 16 cents that it costs the farmer to get his grain to the market. The farmer of course sees to getting cars. The grading is done by the government inspector and so the farmer gets all there is in it save the small commission of one cent per bushel. This is proving a great help to the grain growers and is bringing into the business the right kind of competition that makes it more difficult for elevators to take advantage of the farmer. Farmers who have not enough grain for a carload should endeavour to ship with some of their neighbors who have the same grade so as to take advantage of this new feature on the grain market.—Carstairs Journal.

Go to the blood, if you are to drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician, Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. He says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than too deep—it is constitutional always. Because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to the other, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread rumors. It is an act of humanity to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by H. W. Chambers.

ENGLAND'S OLDEST DOCTOR.

Sir Henry A. Pitman Celebrates His Centenary.

Sir Henry Alfred Pitman, the oldest physician in the United Kingdom, has just celebrated the 100th anniversary of his birthday.

Sir Henry was born on July 1, 1808, became a B.A. of Cambridge in 1831, six years later he became a physician to the throne, was M.D. in 1841, before King Edward was born, and was physician to St. George's Hospital from 1857 to the year of the Indian Mutiny—to 1866, and is still senior consulting physician to the hospital, although for a good many years he has been unable to render active service.

From 1858 to 1889 Sir Henry was Registrar of the Royal College of Physicians, Pall Mall East, and when he retired in that year the college honored him with the title of Emeritus Registrar, and a pension of the same amount as his salary.

Since then the aged physician has lived quietly at his home, in Helynhall Park, Enfield, happy in the companionship of his wife, whom he married fifty-six years ago.

Until a few years ago, Sir Henry was a well-known figure about the country roads of Enfield, for all his life he was a great walker, and he kept up the practice of walking as much as possible, until a few years ago he was knocked down by a vehicle.

Sir Henry Pitman is a tall, dignified man, with fine teeth, somewhat like that resembling those of Mr. Gladstone in his last years, with white hair, white side-whiskers, and a clean-shaven upper lip and chin.

His sight is now failing, and he is rather deaf, but otherwise he has good health, and is able to get about a little, walking with a slight stoop. He is cheerful and full of life, and his robust voice of a man only half his age. The birthday was celebrated with complete privacy, but there were two circumstances which were of special interest.

Among the first of various messages of congratulation which the centenarian received was a long and kindly telegram from King Edward, wishing Sir Henry and his wife every happiness in the days still to come.

The other circumstances, which also gave great gratification to the venerable physician, was a visit from a deputation of members of the Royal College of Physicians.

De Exhibitions Pay?

The Franco-British is by far the biggest exhibition seen in London for many years past. Buildings alone have cost $2,500,000. The colonies have cost $1,500,000. The exhibition, an immense sum of money has been laid out in digging the great lagoon, in making roads of railway, in cutting miles of roads and walks, laying out thirty miles of drains, and installing over half a million electric lights.

It is safe to say that fully ten million dollars were spent in transforming these 140 acres of wilderness into a pleasant paradise before the gates were opened. London has only had one loss. The exhibition of 1862, of which the balance-sheet showed a deficit of $1,000,000. The loss, however, was only about $500,000. The first great International Paris Exhibition of 1867 showed a profit of $4,500,000, but the exhibition of 1878 was a terrible fiasco from a financial point of view. The management had to borrow the loss of over six million dollars. Over 4,000,000 people visited the Paris Exhibition of 1889, yet there was a loss of $2,000,000. Chicago made a profit of $1,400,000 on her tremendous international exhibition of 1893. The heaviest loss of any great exhibition occurred at Vienna in 1873.

The promoters found themselves short of millions of dollars out of pocket. Even one million people outside London visit the Franco-British Exhibition. It is safe to say that London as a whole, will be at least fifteen million dollars the richer.

A Gallant Commander.

Admiral Sir Gerard Noel, Commander-in-Chief at the North, who received the King and Queen at Fort Victoria, on their Majesty's return from Russia, has had some stirring times, for his indomitable pluck and skill always land him on top. One of his worst experiences was at the time of the collision between the Victoria and the Camperdown. On the ill-fated day Admiral Noel, in the Nile, was following the Victoria, while the Edinburgh, commanded by Admiral Brackenbury, was following the Camperdown. Directly the fatal collision occurred, the impossible situation, and by combination of skill, and what amounted virtually to disobedience of orders, a hundred British soldiers and a thousand Christian residents, and piloted from houses, Sir Gerard had the ring-leaders of the massacre handed over, and the ramparts and forts commanding the town surrendered.

The Dot.

"Has that titled son-in-law of yours any business sense?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Duntstax. "I must say I admire his foresight and sagacity. He absolutely refused to take any chance on my reminding him as a poor relation."—Washington Star.

Strictly Fresh Eggs.

There are Summer resorts, remote from any agricultural communities, where fresh farm products are even harder to obtain than in the city. It was at such a place that the new boarder, who had eaten four or five breakfasts there, began to wonder why the eggs were invariably fresh.

"See here," he enquired one morning of the genial colored man who waited upon him, "why do you all always fry eggs here? Don't you boil them?"

"Oh-oh, yes, sah," responded the waiter, pleasantly. "Of se yo' kin hear 'em boiled if yo' wants 'em. But yo' know, sah, yo' takes de risk."

An Oil for All Men.—The sailor, the soldier, the fisherman, the lumberman, the outdoor laborer and all who are exposed to weather and the elements will find in Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil a true and faithful friend. To ease pain, relieve colds, dress wounds, subdue lumbago and overcome rheumatism, it has no equal. Therefore, it should have a place in all home medicines and those taken on a journey.

"I'm coming to your office today, John."

"All right," responded the man who rents in a modern skyscraper. "Telegraph me when you leave the first floor, wife, and I'll meet you at the one hundred and sixty-sixth."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

House flies spread contagious diseases such as typhoid fever, scarlet fever, smallpox and consumption. Wilson's Fly Pads will kill the flies and the disease germs too.

"You love me," echoed Lord Chucksleek, ruminatively.

"That was a strong appeal in those days, but John raised the general at his own game. 'My fellow citizens,' he said, 'General Tucker says to you about brounching under yonder clump of trees is true. It is also true, my fellow citizens, that I was a vedette and stood guard over him while he slept. Now, then, fellow citizens, all you who were generals and had privates to stand over you while you slept vote for General Tucker, and all of you who were privates and stood guard over the generals while they slept vote for Private John Allen.' The people caught the drift of his word and sent him to congress, where he stayed until the world was filled with his renown."

A Stranger.

A traveler in the mountains of Tennessee had been stowed away in the best bed the cottage afforded. Late in the evening he was awakened by the voice of the paterfamilias addressed to the daughter, who was entertaining company by the fire.

"Mandy," growled the old man, "that young man there yidn't?"

"Yes, pap."

"Is he got his arm round yer waist?"

"Yes, pap."

"You-all tell him to take't away."

"Aw, yo tell him yerself, pap," replied the girl in a dull, lifeless voice. "He air a plumb stranger to me."

Persuasive.

All those indebted are requested to call and find out. Those knowing themselves to be indebted and not wishing to call are requested to stay at one place long enough for us to reach them."

MISLEADING NAMES.

Terms in Science That Bells the Products to Which They Apply.

There are terms in certain departments of science that positively mislead the products to which they are applied.

The word "oil" in its more comprehensive and indiscriminate uses is made to include a host of substances, like petroleum, and also many other substances that have an oily appearance, like "oil of vitriol," which is not oil at all, but sulphuric acid.

Strictly speaking, the mineral oils, including all petroleum products, are not oil, although we speak of "coal oil" and "kerosene oil."

The best classifications of oils do not include mineral hydrocarbons, like naphtha, paraffin and petroleum, but treat only the two well defined groups—fixed oils and fats and the essential or volatile oils.

"Coppers" is not copper, but sulphate of iron. "Sulphate of lemon" has nothing to do with the fruit of the lemon tree, but is potassium binoxalate or potash treated with oxalic acid.

"Carbolic acid" is not an acid, but a phenol. In structure it is allied to the alcohols and has only slight acid properties. "Soda water" has no trace of soda. "Sulphurated oil" contains no sulphur. "Sugar of lead" is innocent of sugar.

"Cream of tartar" has nothing to do with cream, but is made of lime with milk. "German silver" is a stranger to silver, and "black lead" is not lead at all, but graphite. "Mosiac gold" is a substance of the gold color.

These misleading names have come down from the vocabulary of an early and insect chemistry. As popular science extends the old terms, and yielding to the more scientific nomenclature.

JOKED HIMSELF IN.

How "Private" John Allen Got Himself Elected to Congress.

Here is "Champ Clark's" defense of humor, if it needs one.

"The dry-as-dust solemnity asseverate that humor never did any good. Now, let's see. How did 'Private' John Allen of Mississippi get to congress?"

Joked himself in. One bit of humor sent him to Washington, a national lawmaker. Opposing him for the congressional nomination was the Confederate General Tucker. They met on the stump. General Tucker closed one of his speeches as follows:

"Seventeen years ago tonight, my fellow citizens, after a hard fought battle on yonder hill, I brought under yonder flag."—Those who remember as I do the times that tried men's souls will not, I hope, forget their humble servant when the primaries shall be held.

"That was a strong appeal in those days, but John raised the general at his own game. 'My fellow citizens,' he said, 'General Tucker says to you about brounching under yonder clump of trees is true. It is also true, my fellow citizens, that I was a vedette and stood guard over him while he slept. Now, then, fellow citizens, all you who were generals and had privates to stand over you while you slept vote for General Tucker, and all of you who were privates and stood guard over the generals while they slept vote for Private John Allen.' The people caught the drift of his word and sent him to congress, where he stayed until the world was filled with his renown."

Aid For the Explorer.

"Peary," said a geographer of Chicago, "never started on one of his exploring expeditions without receiving by mail and express all sorts of packages from cranks—cowhide underwear, tablets, medicated boots and what not."

"Peary once told me that George Ade a few days before the start of one trip wired him to expect an important package by express."

"The package came. It was labeled: 'To be opened at the farthest point north.'"

"Peary opened it at once, however. It was a small keg, inscribed: 'Axle grease for the pole.'"

Shouldn't Overfeed Hubby.

Hint for young wives who desire to have their husbands retain their boyish, slender figures: In an address at Vienna on the subject of food Professor Karl Van Noorden, one of the greatest medical experts in Europe, uttered an emphatic protest against wives who overfeed their husbands.

He declared that the reason so many begin to get fat immediately after they have married is that their wives give them their favorite dishes on every possible occasion.

Barn Destroyed by Fire

Last Thursday afternoon about four o'clock the barn on the farm of Ross Kimmell, 16 miles east and 4 miles north of Carstairs was destroyed by fire. The barn was 24x42 in size. In the barn was also destroyed 40 bags of timothy seed and about 100 bush of oats. The timothy seed was destroyed jointly one third by Mr. Kimmell and two thirds by Mr. Frank Hemmelreich and Johnson. Mr. Johnson also lost a horse and calf. The only insurance was $125 on the barn owned by Mr. Kimmell. The origin of the fire is unknown as no one was on the place at the time.—Carstairs Journal.

Sunday School Convention

The seventh Provincial Sunday School Convention is to be held in Medicine Hat November 3-5.

The principal speaker will be Mr. W. C. Pearce, International Superintendent of the Adult Department. Mr. Pearce is a very interesting and practical speaker. He is the leader of the Adult Department, the greatest movement of the 20th Century in Sunday School work. It is practically through his efforts that this Department has become so prominent during the past few years. Thousands of men through the work of the Department have been gathered into the Sunday schools in all parts of the North American Continent. At the recent International Convention held at Louisville, Ky., under Mr. Pearce's leadership 1200 business men belonging to the adult classes marched through the streets of that city and demonstrated to the public that the Sunday School is no longer to be regarded as simply for little children, but that it is for men also, and men of the highest caliber. The Sunday School workers of the Province should make a special effort to hear Mr. Pearce.

This promises to be the greatest religious gathering ever held in the province. The general theme is "The Twentieth Century Sunday School organized for effectual work." The different phases of the organization and work of the up-to-date Sunday School will be discussed. The Sunday School should be the right arm of the church, in all lines of Christian effort, hence this Convention will endeavor to show what the Twentieth Century Sunday School should do in training workers in soul winning, in character building in moral reform, in reaching the neglected masses, and many other life questions.

Each School can send the Pastor and Superintendent, and one additional delegate for each twenty five (25) of the enrollment or fraction thereof. The Provincial Board hopes that all Schools will send full delegations.

Manitoba Town in Trouble

There is a municipal muddle at Carman, Man. A little over a year ago the town of Carman sold $50,000 worth of debentures to establish and equip a waterworks and sewerage system in the town. Nearly $55,000 has already been expended on the work, and a bylaw to raise $25,000 more to complete the job, as it has been found necessary to relay the mains already installed, was submitted to the ratepayers a fortnight ago and defeated. As a result the entire council resigned, and a new election will shortly be held.—Balduf Gazette.

Better than Ever

Our readers when deciding on their reading matter for 1909, should not overlook "The Family Herald and Weekly Star" of Montreal. Of course you want your local paper for local news, but any home in Canada would be the better of receiving "The Family Herald and Weekly Star." It costs but one dollar a year, and is without doubt the greatest value in the newspaper line. It is a weekly newspaper, family magazine and an agricultural journal, all three in one. It should be in every Canadian home.

Provincial Notes

The ratepayers of Lacombe, Alta., will be asked to vote $5,000 for the purpose of launching the erection of a sanatorium by the Seventh Day Adventists.

The contract for the building of the Providence general hospital at Daysland, Alta., has been awarded to Rendall & McKay, of Edmonton, who will begin work immediately. It will be an imposing structure 40x60, three storeys and a basement.

The town of Claresholm is considering the advisability of going into the electric light business, installing a new generating plant in connection with their waterworks system.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice.

A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A touch also goes to the heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by H. W. Chambers.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is not a symptom of, and not to be treated as, indigestion. It is a disease of the stomach, and indigestion is a result of it.
